BOKSILI

Once upon a time, in a small village, there was Boksili, who didn’t like itself at all.

Actually, it didn’t like how others saw it.

Boksili's mother didn't like the village either.
So, their house was always filled with stories of faraway lands and many different people.

Boksili often dreamed of going to a place so big that its small self wouldn't feel so important.
It wanted to start all over in a brand new place.

One day, Boksili got its chance.

The pied piper

A fairy tale character appeared!!!
Boksili was shocked.

In the story Boksili had read, Peeriboo came once every six years and took the village children away.

But Boksili couldn't understand why six years was such a long time.

To Boksili, the Peeriboo was like a fleeting comet.

So that very day, Boksili left.

As if it were an inevitable fate.

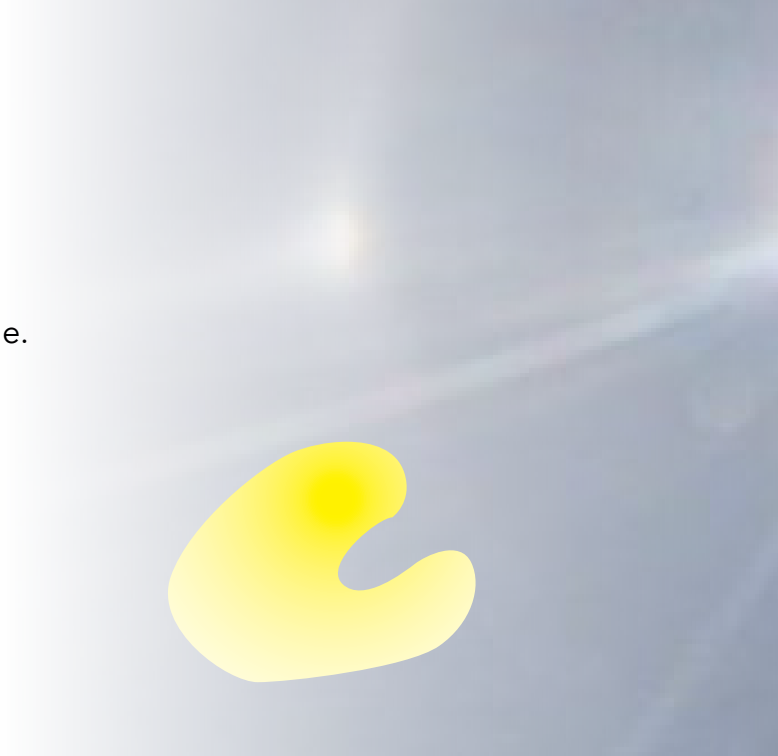

Along the road...
To a place where no one knows it...

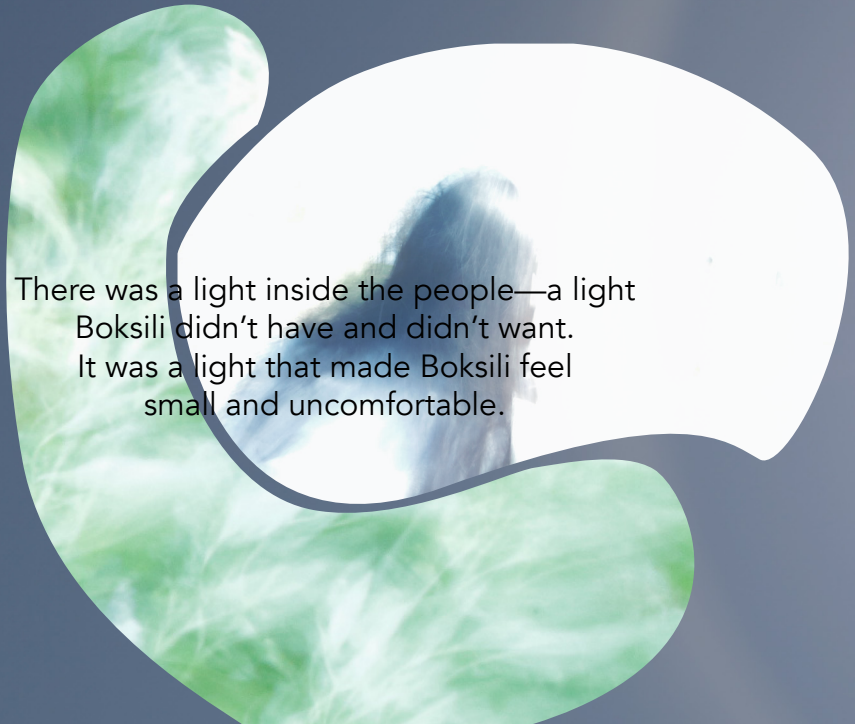

The village Boksili found was full of kind people.
Even though it was small,
Boksili felt like it could make a new start here.

However, over time,
Boksili began to notice a gap between itself and the others.

There was a light inside the people—a light
Boksili didn't have and didn't want.
It was a light that made Boksili feel small and uncomfortable.

So, Boksili hid, holding its breath,
avoiding the eerie light until the Peeriboo returned.

Finally

After six long years, Peeriboo returned.

Without a hesitation, Boksili followed Peeribo.
It had been waiting for this moment.

They walked and walked,

step after step.

As they walked,
questions popped into Boksili's head.

Where are we going?

Peeribo didn’t answer, as usual.

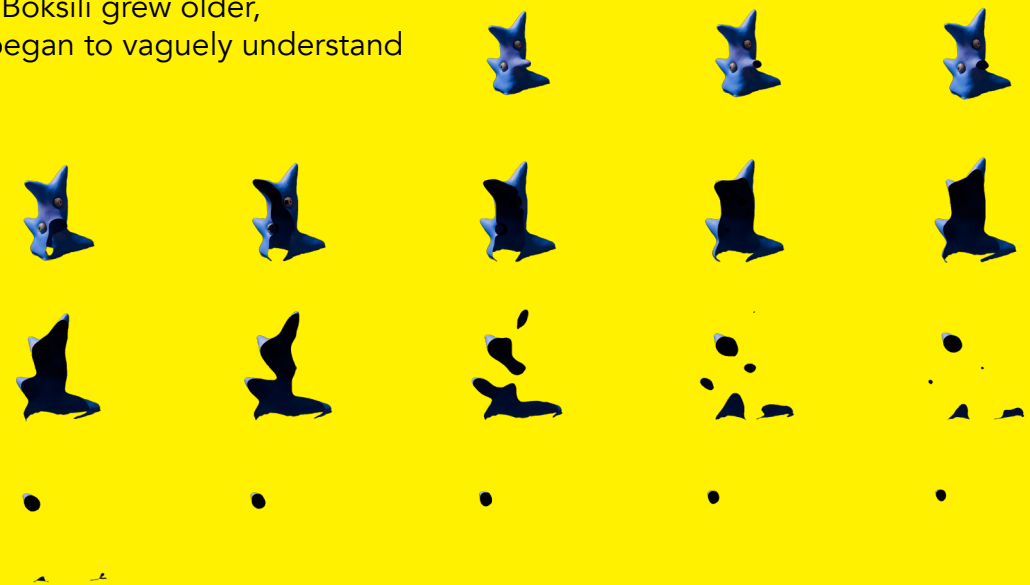

Why am I walking?

still

Who am I?

Actually, the child didn’t really expect an answer.
Instead, it questions itself.

As Boksili grew older,
it began to vaguely understand

I am a Peeriboo,
and my destination is wherever my steps take me.

The way he moves seems a little lighter.
